Reviewers' comments:

Reviewer #1: The aim of the research is to study, analyze and evaluate the legal politics of the system of payment of workers' wages in accordance with the applicable legal provisions in the community, and analyze and assess the obstacles in implementing the wage payment system to create social justice especially for company workers. In accordance with the intended purpose, the recommendations addressed are more attention to the gap between legal regulations and the practical implementation of employee payroll. In addition, the paper must clearly define legal politics, giving more attention to a more adequate literature review. In general, this paper is worthy of publication and empirical by comparing the conditions of labor payroll in several countries in ASEAN.

Reviewer #2: The paper need to explain the view and respected regulation of Representatives from government ministries and institutions, employers' and workers' organizations as well as national and provincial wage councils. Moreover, it needs a justification how workers social partners having conducted a number of activities to facilitate the development of a wage policy monitoring system as the basis for the development of an evidence-based wage policy making mechanism.

Also, brief some best practices from some neighboring countries, and the recommendation of research result to be used as inputs to the National Wage Council to improve mechanisms of minimum wage fixing, including the development of the above-minimum wage system.
